Specializing in turnkey interior architecture and design for custom homes and full-home remodels, Maloney Interiors has a vast portfolio that reflects their clients' diverse tastes, the history of their homes, and a thrilling streak of the unexpected. Ally Maloney Winzer, the principal of Maloney Interiors and current New England President of the American Society of Interior Designers (ASID), leads a firm of passionate designers with an ambition to create, inspire and invent.

Serving Rhode Island and South East Massachusetts, the majority of projects for Maloney are vacation and coastal homes. However, that doesn't mean they all contain the same design elements. Explains Maloney, "I don't want to be defined by a singular style. As the interior designer, we are our client's creative visionary, and our portfolio reflects our clients' diverse tastes." She continues, "A successful luxury design project should be authentic. It must successfully capture and reflect who the clients are. No matter how luxurious, it should always feel relaxed and comfortable."

Having completed numerous renovations and restoration projects of prominent Gilded Age Newport homes, Winzer prides herself on "creative transformations that infuse magnificent older homes with bright interiors and modern amenities while respecting the historic architectural elements." Additionally, Maloney and her company have vast experience designing custom yacht interiors.

Priding herself on an exceptional customer service experience, Maloney says "Our clients can truly have fun with and enjoy the process of building or renovating their dream home knowing that our firm leads each project with an organized and streamlined approach backed by our professionalism and expertise, creative artistry, cross-team collaboration, and executive precision."
